

Winfred Quashie (Ghananian)

Winfred is a TEMI 1st & 2nd carat holder. He was an ALT for several years in Japan and has returned to Ghana to rejoin his family.

From Winfred:

A teacher is never a teacher unless he or she can empathize with learners, respect them and believe each one of them has a unique trait that we can build on. With great tolerance and a slightly bigger heart other than that of the ordinary heart we can do it. I am happy to announce that, in less than a year, some students can truly tell me their true feelings as they have warmed up to me and they believe in me, something I will forever cherish.

Helene's comment:

Winfred captured my heart from a distance. He emailed me from Iwate to praise our Little America materials, sent in questions to my "Primary Advice" JAPAN NEWS column and joined us for two TEMI seminars in Tokyo. The highlight of those two seminars was being able to meet Winfred face to face and share our stories with the group.

I still feel very close to him even though he has returned to teach in Guana to teach there. How lucky his students there are!

Winfred's comment:

I would like to reiterate my position that TEMI as an institution shares its tried and tested teaching strategies and techniques aimed at raising leaders with the responsible roles and tasks assigned to learners right from onset.

At TEMI visions are shaped carefully and teachers acting as facilitators enjoy a great worth of satisfaction seeing their learners progress from stage to stage with their English speaking and listening skills as they influence society with their profound knowledge by using English.

Even novice teachers can easily apply and adapt the teaching techniques to transform them into enviable brands.

I wish you all the very best!
